Many readers may have read about the problem. I know I mentioned it in my last post about scheduled tasks. If you are interested, there is a product that can help you deal with it. I ran into it myself. I'm going to show you how to use the product I'm talking about - TerminateScheduledTasks.ini. But it's totally free. In contrast to the malware, it cleans up after itself when the user quits Terminate Scheduled Tasks. In the next couple of paragraphs I'm going to explain you how to install and use the program. You can download the program from here. There are 3 executable files there: TerminateScheduledTasks.exe: A Windows installer. This one will install TerminateScheduledTasks.ini in the user's Documents folder. Make sure you are using the latest version. TerminateScheduledTasks.ini: This one will install TerminateScheduledTasks.ini. You probably want to delete it before running the installer. TerminateScheduledTasks.exe: This one starts the tool if it's not already running. First, you need to check the Windows firewall in your computer. I'm not going to explain how to do this. You can use Internet Explorer to do it. If you have the firewall turned off, click the green arrow in the lower right corner of Internet Explorer. You will get a dialogue box that says (1) Allow this program to run, and (2) Prompt on all programs I start. If you have the firewall turned on, click the green arrow in the lower right corner of Internet Explorer. You will get a dialogue box that says Allow this program to run and enable it for the current session. Next, you need to install TerminateScheduledTasks.ini. You will have to manually copy the file in the installation folder. The installation folder is C:\Users\
