Here is the code when it runs on the emulator : I think the problem is with this line : `sp[t].push_back(sp[t - 1]);` the string references and how it is changing every time it is called. A: You are declaring your string as a local variable within a function, which means that each time you call this function it will allocate a new string instance. Since you are using it as a member variable this is throwing your program. Solutions include : 1) Declare the string as a member variable : `std::string sp[MAXSIZE];` 2) Declare the string as a class field : `std::string sp[MAXSIZE]; class Player { public: static Player* s_player; } 3) Define the string as a global variable`

Q: Put multiple variables in one mysql query? A simple query `$sql = mysql_query("SELECT * FROM clients WHERE id='$client'");` Should return rows based on the id. `$client` contains a string of the form `myid123`. However i need it to return rows based on `id123` for example. How do i add the variable into it? Example: `$sql = mysql_query("SELECT * FROM clients WHERE id='id$client'");` I have tried escaping with `\` and no luck. Any ideas? A: The problem is that `$client` will be given the value of `$client` when you execute the query. Therefore it will be `id123` and `id123123`, and so on, and you will not get any results. You need to make `$client` a variable that is interpolated when this query is executed.

Initially, this just meant documentation pages that are hard to find. I knew there were a bunch of developers out there who were familiar with the API's and wanted to share the tricks of their trade, so to speak. I've put together a few FAQ's about the various files that are on the website, and of course, there are plenty of other things you can ask. If you have a question, leave it in the comments, and I'll answer it as best I can. First, here are the top 10 FAQ's right now: If you're just getting started with the API, this is probably the first place you'll look. If you're just learning Ruby, this is the place to come. If you're wondering how to build Ruby applications, this is the place to come for that. If you're wondering about the different 6d1f23a050
